Abstract

This study explores the implementation of memos on the one of SOEs in Indonesia. Using an ethnomethodological perspective, researchers found that memo implementation requires precondition. The main precondition in the use of memos is the existence of "Omong-omongan", reflexivity refers to the word "agree". The form of agreement is actually related to the terms consensus and compromise. However, the form of "agree" based on the interpretation of their conversation apparently does not refer to both. From further interpretation, the researcher believes that "agree" is a form of the subordinates loyalty to their commander.
